MUSEUM OF MODERN ART EXHIBITS FABRICS MADE FROM PRIZE-WINNING DESIGNS. SIMULTANEOUS DISPLAY
BY NINETEEN LEADING DEPARTMENT STORES THROUGHOUT COUNTRY

Four prize-winning modern designs executed in a variety of color combinations will be shown for the first time anywhere when the Museum of Modern Art, 11 West 53 Street, opens on Wednesday, March 12, its exhibition of PRINTED TEXTILES FOR THE HOME: Prize-winning Designs from National Competition. Simultaneously, nineteen stores throughout the country will display the fabrics in room settings. The four prize-winning designs were selected from 2,443 entries received from 44 States and the District of Columbia in the $2,250 prize competition for the design of printed fabrics held by the Museum February--June, 1946. The only states from which entries were not received were Alabama, Nevada, South Dakota and Vermont. The greatest number of entries, 374, came from New York; California was second, with 175. The exhibition, which closes at the Museum June 15, will then be sent by the Circulating Department on tour to other cities throughout the country.

Winner of the first prize of $500 was Mrs. Yvonne Delattre, at the time of the Competition a student at the Cranbrook Academy in Bloomfield Hills, Mich. Mrs. Delattre, who has studied both in this country and abroad, now lives in Philadelphia.

The second prize of $350 was won by Milton Weiner of 314 South Broad Street, Philadelphia, who also took one of the two third prizes of $250 each, which netted him in prize money $100 more than the winner of the first prize. The other third-prize winner was Fredric Karoly of 111 East 48 Street, New York City. June Groff, 1825 Wylie Street, Philadelphia, won the fourth prize of $150 plus an Honorable Mention of $50.

In addition to the fabrics executed from the first, second, and two third prize designs, the exhibition will consist of these original designs, the design which won the fourth prize, and those that won the fifteen Honorable Mentions of $50 each. The Honorable Mentions were won by the following designers:

During war, with U.S. Coast and Geodetic Survey as Engineering Draftsman.

Later, Supervisor of Art Department at Philadelphia Signal Corps.

Now at N. W. Ayer & Son as Art Director.

"My wife and I designed fabrics together in our free time as a hobby when we decided to enter Museum competition. We have exhibited fabrics at The Philadelphia Art Alliance, Rochester, N. W. Ayer, the Philadelphia Print Club, The Philadelphia Museum School of Industrial Art.

"Aside from our fabrics, we are now designing limited edition wallpaper and illustrating a children's book for publication in December, 1947."

Fredric Karoly - Winner of one of the two Third Prizes

"I was born in Budapest, Hungary, studied architectural engineering but entered the field of fashion design when given the opportunity by a Paris couture house to create clothes for them. They had seen my fine-art work, which I did in my free time. Success led to continued work in this field not only in Paris but later in London, Vienna, Berlin and finally New York, where I arrived in February, 1926, obtaining my U.S. citizenship in 1931. In order to obtain exclusive fabrics for my designs of women's fashions, I found it desirable to develop my own fabrics and eventually designed a number of printed fabrics for women's dresses. In connection with the designs of various modern interiors such as showrooms and apartments for which I drew the plans, I created the drapery fabrics.

"For seven years and at present I am the designer for Davidow, Inc., of New York and London and am responsible for the well-known, nation-wide publicized DAVIDOW Suit, as well as the general collection of this concern's sports clothes for women. However, my great interest lies in contemporary art and my entire time outside of my professional designing is given to painting, graphic work in many media and experimental photography. The Museum of Modern Art's Fabric Design Competition gave me my first opportunity to compete in the field of designs for home furnishings. I aimed to create a design which would appeal even to the less modern minded public, yet, truly modern without any concession which might affect its quality.

"For many years I have been an ardent observer of all phases of contemporary art which is offering such an abundance of inspiration and stimulation to the creative mind and I have acquired a small but important collection of oils, drawings, etchings and lithographs by such artists as Picasso, André Masson, Matisse, Eugene Berman, Max Ernst, Chagall and others."
