FOR IMMEDIATE RELEASE

MUSEUM'S HOUSE IN THE GARDEN TO OPEN APRIL 14. FURNITURE DESCRIBED.

The House in the Museum Garden, designed by Marcel Breuer, will be open to the public from April 14 to October 30. A separate entrance for visitors to the house behind the Museum of Modern Art will be maintained at 4 West 54th Street, and an admission fee of 35 cents will be charged.

Work of assembling the interior furnishings for the house, undertaken by New Design, Inc., of New York, is now in the final phase. Among the new features of the home's furniture will be Breuer-designed tables in various sizes molded entirely of a single piece of plywood. These were manufactured originally in England under the trade name "Isokon," and they will soon be available in this country. Also designed by Marcel Breuer will be a new line of chairs to be presented for the first time anywhere. These are made of cut-out plywood with cane seat and back. Other well-known furniture designers whose work will help furnish the house include Charles Eames, Eero Saarinen and Alvar Aalto.

Furniture and furnishings selected for the house will be in keeping throughout with the needs and the income of the average suburban family likely to build such a house. Described by Breuer as "the house for the commuter who has personal views in selecting his land, probably at least an acre," the expandable house can be built in its first phase for about $20,000 and in its later phase for $25,000.
