Advance notice for magazines. Not for release.

On October 8 (tentative), the Museum of Modern Art will re-open all four gallery floors, the garden, the auditorium and both restaurants.

Jean Arp, on the third floor through November 30, will be a major retrospective consisting of more than 100 stone and bronze sculptures, wood reliefs, collages, paintings, tapestries, etc., assembled from public and private collections here and abroad. Directed by James Thrall Soby, Chairman of the Department of Painting and Sculpture. To be accompanied by a book of essays by Arp, Richard Huelsenbeck, Carola Giedion-Welcker and Robert Melville, edited and with an introduction by Mr. Soby; 114 illustrations.

Paintings from the Museum Collection, on view in the second floor galleries, will again survey the art of our time from about 1875 to the present by showing outstanding work by international artists.

Recent Acquisitions, works of major importance including a bequest, will be shown through November 9 in a special exhibition on the first floor.

Architecture Worth Saving will be on view in the Auditorium Gallery through December 15. Co-sponsored by the Museum of Modern Art, the National Trust for Historic Preservation and Architectural Forum Magazine, the exhibition of enlarged photographs will show several late 19th and early 20th-century buildings from various parts of the United States.

The Films of Paul Rotha will be screened twice daily for 4 weeks.

In the Garden sculpture from the Museum Collection will be re-installed. At least one new acquisition is expected to be on view. Autumn flowers will be planted under the birch trees.

Enlarged Library and re-located Print Room, both on the fourth floor, will be open to the general public.

Classes at the People's Art Center will resume September 22. Registration after Labor Day.

Art Lending Service. In an enlarged, renovated 6th floor gallery, a new selection of works of art for sale or rental to Museum members; 12 to 5:30 daily.
