Nine posters by Picasso have been added to Picasso in the Museum of Modern Art, the Museum's major summer exhibition, on view through September 18. The posters, all from the Museum Collection, are original black-and-white and color woodcuts and a color lithograph, executed in the 50's for bullfights and for exhibitions of the artist's work.

Picasso in the Museum of Modern Art, which has been on view since May 15, includes 80 paintings, sculptures, drawings and collages, 97 prints and 5 illustrated books from the Collection, all shown together for the first time in honor of the artist's 80th birthday. It is supplemented by eleven important canvases which have been promised as future gifts or have already been partly given to the Museum, and by the great Guernica mural and 53 studies, on loan from Picasso since 1939.
