Le Corbusier, an illustrated lecture by Arthur Drexler, will be given in the Museum of Modern Art auditorium, 11 West 53 Street, on Thursday, March 28, at 8:30 p.m. The lecture is arranged in connection with the Museum's exhibition of post-war buildings by the great French architect, on view through April 15. Mr. Drexler, Director of the Museum's Department of Architecture and Design, selected the exhibition. According to Mr. Drexler, the work of Le Corbusier has had "a more decisive effect on the course of architecture in our time than that of any other architect."

Tickets, $1.50 for Museum members, $2.00 for non-members, 75 cents for students, include admission to Museum galleries, open Thursday evenings until 9. Dinner and refreshments are available in the Garden Cafeteria.

The Museum's Le Corbusier exhibition includes thirteen recent buildings in Europe and India shown in 150 large color transparencies. The exhibition is presented in collaboration with the Graham Foundation for Advanced Studies in the Fine Arts. It will later be shown at the Art Institute of Chicago.
