EXHIBITIONS

Throughout the year

THE MUSEUM COLLECTION. Selections on view in the Sculpture Garden, Philip L. Goodwin Galleries for Architecture and Design, Paul J. Sachs Galleries for Drawings and Prints and Edward Steichen Photography Center Gallery, and Main Hall. New installation on second and third floor painting galleries by William S. Lieberman, Director, Department of Painting and Sculpture. Newly acquired works by young American artists Jo Baer, Robert Mangold, Donald Kaufman, Ralph Humphrey and Jules Olitski are exhibited on the third floor.

DECEMBER OPENINGS

*Dec. 1 - EUGENE ATGET. A sampling of 120 works by the French photographer (1856-1927)
Mar. 22, 1970 selected from the collection of several thousand prints and over one thousand plates acquired by the Museum last year from Berenice Abbott and Julian Levy with the aid of a gift from Shirley C. Burden. The selection represents the rich variety of subjects that Atget covered, including Versailles, St. Cloud, sculpture, people, trees, flowers, shop windows, architectural details such as doorknobs, formal spaces and picturesque streets in Paris. The entire collection is currently being documented and catalogued by Yolanda Hershey, Archivist in charge of the Atget Collection. John Szarkowski, Director, Department of Photography, is selecting and installing the exhibition. 1st floor, galleries 5 & 6.

* NOTE CHANGE OF DATE

- Dec. 9 -
Feb. 15, 1970      THE GRAPHIC CONSTRUCTIONS OF JOSEF ALBERS. Two series of prints, Graphic Tonic of 1942 and Embossed Linear Constructions of 1969, which use mechanically ordered elements. The latter group was made by an engineering programmer and hydraulic press fulfilling Albers' wish to "oppose a belief that hand-made is better than machine- or tool-made." Selected and installed by Riva Castleman. 1st floor.
- *Dec. 18-
Feb. 15, 1970      A SALUTE TO ALEXANDER CALDER. The third in the continuing series of major exhibitions drawn entirely from the Museum's collection surveying in depth the work of an artist or movement. The range of Calder's development is shown by some 30 sculptures and constructions in wire and wood, stabiles, mobiles free moving and electrified, as well as drawings, prints, illustrated books and jewelry. Included are the well-known caricature Josephine Baker (1927-29), the famous motorized mobile A Universe (1934), the suspended mobile Lobster Trap and Fish Tail (1939), and the monumental Sandy's Butterfly (1964). Directed by William S. Lieberman, Dir., Dept. of Painting and Sculpture. 1st floor.
- Dec. 30 -
Jan. 8, 1970      SPACES. During recent years many artists have been turning away from the traditions of art that prescribe a static object and a passive viewer. Instead they have begun to create environmental situations which envelop the viewer and involve him with the materials of art. Five artists and a collaborative group, who work in diverse styles and a variety of mediums, have been invited to create environments. These will be dismantled after the exhibition period, extending the artists' revolt against the attitude that regards the work of art as an object to be preserved and marketed. Michael Asher, Larry Bell, Dan Flavin, Robert Morris, and Franz Edward Walther will create environments in the exhibition gallery, and the Pulsa Group--10 research artists affiliated with Yale University who are deeply involved with electronic technology--will use the garden for an outdoor project. 1st floor.

Jan. 3,1971 Approximately 100 works, including paintings, prints, drawings, and sculpture acquired by Gertrude, Leo, Michael and Sarah Stein when these Americans were early patrons of Matisse, Picasso and other artists in Paris who were to become internationally known as pioneers of the modern movement. The exhibition will include works by Picasso and Juan Gris acquired from the Gertrude Stein Estate last year, most of which have never been shown in this country, as well as works from public and private collections here and abroad. One gallery will be devoted to photographs and other documents of the period. A series of related evening events will be presented. The exhibition will later be shown in Baltimore and San Francisco. Directed by William S. Lieberman and Margaret Potter, both of the Museum's Department of Painting and Sculpture. An illustrated catalogue will be edited by Irene Gordon. 1st floor, East and Northeast wing.
