MUSEUM OF MODERN ART PUBLISHES ROAD TO VICTORY BULLETIN

Here is our Museum Bulletin, just published, which by picture and text takes the reader through our current Road to Victory exhibition. The Bulletin sells for fifteen cents and, for those who cannot come in person to the exhibition, it affords a very good view of it.

The 150 photographs which make up the exhibition were selected by Lieut. Commander Edward Steichen from more than 100,000 photographs received from many sources. Approximately 90% of the photographs used in the exhibition are from government departments and agencies, such as the U. S. Army, the U. S. Navy, the Department of Agriculture, the Farm Security Administration, and so on. The photographs have been selected for the exhibition to show what we are fighting for and who is doing the fighting--not only our armed forces but farmers, workers, families and even the good American earth itself with all its riches. The exhibition will be on view through September 20.

Our new Museum hours, which began July 1 and will continue for the duration of the war, will make it possible for most people with jobs to visit the Museum for an hour or more after work. We now open at 12 Noon every day except Sundays, when the opening hour is 1 P.M., and remain open until 7 P.M. every day including Sundays. This late closing hour enables people to see all the exhibitions the Museum shows and also to take in our motion picture programs which are now run twice daily including Sundays, at 3 P.M. and 5:30 P.M.
