An exhibition of German Painting and Sculpture will be opened to the public at the Museum of Modern Art on Friday, March 13th. The exhibition will extend through Sunday, April 26th.

The exhibition will be the most important one of twentieth century German art ever held in America. It will include nearly one hundred paintings by twenty-one of the leading modern masters of Germany together with a distinguished collection of sculpture by six outstanding modern German sculptors.

It is believed that the quality of the work will be shown will do much to awaken the American public to the importance of modern art in Europe outside of France.
