FOR IMMEDIATE RELEASE

60 MODERN DRAWINGS: RECENT ACQUISITIONS, the new summer show at The Museum of Modern Art, will be on view from August 6 through September 29. Selected by William S. Lieberman, Curator of Drawings and Prints, from works acquired during the past year, the exhibition includes drawings dated 1886 to 1963 by 45 artists from 9 countries.

The most important group of acquisitions is the gift of John S. Newberry, a member of the Museum's Paul J. Sachs Committee on Drawings and Prints. It includes illustrations by Balthus for Emily Brontë's Wuthering Heights; The Iceman, a pen and ink drawing by Max Beckmann; study for Amour Agonize (1886), the earliest drawing in the exhibition, by the French sculptor Emile-Antoine Bourdelle; The Angler, a watercolor by Paul Klee once owned by the National Gallery in Berlin; two ballet dancers drawn by Picasso in London in 1919; and a pair of "metaphysical" studies of 1915 by the Italian painter Mario Sironi who died in 1961.

The youngest artists in the exhibition are three Americans under thirty: Robert Barnes of Kansas City, Sidney Goodman of Philadelphia and Michael Mazur of Providence. The drawing by Barnes is an imaginary portrait of the English eccentric and naturalist, Charles Waterton; those by Mazur are preparatory studies of mental patients for a large etching, Closed Ward Number 12. Both Goodman and Barnes were included in Recent Painting U.S.A.: The Figure, the exhibition sponsored by the Museum's Junior Council in 1962.

In the new Museum, now under construction, special galleries for drawings and prints will be named for Paul J. Sachs, one of the Museum's original Trustees, whose gifts of prints and a drawing were among the Museum's first acquisitions in 1929. Three drawings by sculptors in this exhibition, given to the Museum in honor of Professor Sachs, are a Nude by the American John B. Flannagan, gift of E. Weyhe; a drawing by Henri Gaudier-Brzeska, the French sculptor who worked in England, gift of H. S. Ede; and Henry Moore's Women Winding Wool of 1949, gift of Mr. and Mrs. John A. Pope.

In addition to Mr. Newberry, two other members of the Museum's Paul J. Sachs Committee, Walter Bareiss and Mrs. Gertrud A. Mellon, have contributed to the exhibition. Among Mr. Bareiss' gifts are works by two Americans who taught at the Bauhaus in Germany during the 1920's, Herbert Bayer and Lyonel Feininger. Mrs. Mellon's gift consists of drawings by two artists now working in Germany, the sculptor Otto Hajek and the painter Hann Trier.

Although the subject matter of the 60 recent acquisitions is varied, faces and figures form a selection of particular interest. Portraits include the sculptor

Jean Arp drawn by Frederick Kiesler, the dramatist Bertolt Brecht by Antonio Frasconi, John Dewey by Henri Matisse, a large allegory by Jack Roth memorializing the celebrated dead of 1962 (Isak Dinesen, Franz Kline and Marilyn Monroe, etc.), and an eight-foot self analysis by Bernard Pfriem. Among several nudes are drawings by Bourdelle, Flannagan, La Fresnaye, Picasso and Rodin; Delvaux's At Claude and Ruth's, formerly owned by the surrealist painter, Yves Tanguy, and now the bequest of his widow, the American painter Kay Sage; and a pair of two superb drawings by Jules Pascin, gifts of Mr. and Mrs. Peter Rubel. Less realistic renditions of the human figure are drawings by the Polish painter Lebenstein and the Mexican muralist Orozco.

American artists represented in the Museum's collection for the first time, all purchased through a fund established by Mrs. Robert C. Scull, are Robert Barnes, Matsumi Kanemitsu, William Majors, Michael Mullen, Henry Pearson, Carl Pickhardt, Seymour Rosofsky and Philip van Aver.

An imaginary portrait by Robert Barnes of Charles Waterton (1782-1865), the adventurous English naturalist who rode a crocodile and ate monkey meat, has an affinity with five other drawings: Flea by the American sculptor Leonard Baskin, Remains of a Meal of Carp by the young German Hartmut Freidrich, the English sculptor Elisabeth Frink's Bird, Gaudier-Brzeska's Pelican and Paul Klee's Fritzi.

Mr. Lieberman, Director of the exhibition, says:

These drawings have been acquired by the Museum since April, 1962 when an exhibition 50 Drawings reported earlier additions to the collection. The selection attempts no general survey or geographic representation. Artists working in the United States are the authors of approximately half the drawings. Other countries represented are Austria, Belgium, France, Germany, Great Britain, Italy, the Netherlands and Poland. Drawings by nineteen artists have been done since 1960 and thirteen of the artists included are sculptors.

Three of four watercolors by Rodin were originally in the collection of Jules E. Mastbaum, the great American admirer of the sculptor who created the Rodin Museum in Philadelphia. They are gifts of one of his daughters, Mrs. Patrick Dinehart.

Perhaps the most unexpected drawings is the Chrysanthemum by Mondrian. However Matisse's portrait of an American philosopher and Klee's of his own cat are two close seconds.
