From: Elizabeth Shaw, Publicity Director

You are cordially invited to a press preview of AMERICAN ACQUISITIONS:
Recent Additions of Prints to the Museum's Collection on Tuesday, March 31, from 9:30 a.m. to 4:00 p.m. in the Auditorium Gallery of the Museum of Modern Art, 11 West 53 Street, New York City.

The exhibition of approximately 60 monotypes, etchings, woodcuts and lithographs by American artists dating from Maurice Prendergast's 1901 "Woman with Parasol" to the 1959 "Intaglio Duo B" by Josef Albers will be on view from April 2 through May 31. Among the other artists in the exhibition are John Marin, Lyonel Feininger, Leonard Baskin, Antonio Frasconi, Norma Morgan, Harold Altman, John Hultberg and Clinton Hill.

A press release and photographs will be available at the preview, which coincides with the NEW TALENT preview in the Penthouse from 9:30 to 11:30 a.m.

I am enclosing the most recent catalog listing of Painting and Sculpture Acquisitions from January 1, 1959 through December 31, 1959, for your reference library.

This Bulletin is the third supplement to the checklist, Painting and Sculpture in the Museum of Modern Art: a catalog which was published in the spring of 1958 and which listed works acquired through the end of 1956.

Unfortunately only a few of these works are currently on view because of our extremely limited gallery space. At the conclusion of our 30th Anniversary Drive, however, and when our new building is completed, these and the hundreds of paintings and sculptures we own will be readily accessible, either in galleries or in study-storage.

Sincerely,

Elizabeth Shaw

Hell and Jeremy Sandford, a painting by the British artist John Bratby, has been given to the Museum of Modern Art, 11 West 53 Street, New York City, and is now on view in a special showing of recent acquisitions. This is the first work by the artist to enter the Collection.

Bratby, who has studied in London and Italy, won the Guggenheim National Section Prize for Britain in 1956 and 1958. He has had one-man shows at the Beaux-Arts Gallery in London and has paintings in galleries in England, Canada, New Zealand, and New South Wales.

When asked about his painting the artist wrote: "I cannot paint in a vacuum. My work must be seen and related to society....My work will always be essentially of the time I exist in. I wish to gear my work to the painting needs of society, and am willing to compromise 5 percent--more compromise murders my work, or more compromise makes me ill."

About the Hell and Jeremy Sandford he states: "This work is very much a 'Bratby,' but it is on its own because of its mosaic, worried composition. Most of my work is more painterly. This work is unique. It is however a major work."

The exhibition which includes 27 paintings and sculptures by 24 artists from 15 countries will be on view through April 19.

Three paintings by the South American artists, Jorge Zaniani of Uruguay, Teresa Nicolao of Brazil, and Miguel Ocampo of Argentina have been purchased by the Museum of Modern Art, 11 West 53 Street, New York City, and are currently on view in a special exhibition of recent acquisitions. These are the first works by the artists to enter the collection.

Zaniani, who was born in Genoa in 1931, studied in Milan where his work was exhibited in 1951. In addition to painting murals in Uruguay, he exhibited at the National Salon of Fine Arts in Montevideo from 1955-58. When asked about his painting, Agony, the artist wrote: "My special concern has always been the glorification of eternal human values...death, life, suffering, poverty, joy, etc. If through the image of that man in agony joined by his beloved, one truly feels a human message, my work will have been justified."

Teresa Nicolao, whose painting Shanty Town, I (Favela) has been purchased by the Museum, was born in 1908 in Rio de Janeiro, where she now lives.

The 37-year old Miguel Ocampo, was born in Buenos Aires, and has exhibited there as well as in Paris, Rome, where he now lives, and New York.

The exhibition which includes 27 paintings and sculptures by 24 artists from 15 countries will be on view through April 19.

A welded iron and steel sculpture by the 37-year old artist Richard Stankiewicz, who was born in Philadelphia, has been purchased by the Museum of Modern Art, 11 West 53 Street, New York City, and is currently on view in a special exhibition of recent acquisitions. This is the first work by this artist to enter the collection.

Called Instruction, the sculptor uses cast off pieces of machinery and other metal parts to depict a "student" and a "teacher."

Stankiewicz studied in New York, where he now lives, and in Paris. Asked about his background in relation to his sculpture, the artist replied that possibly "a childhood of play in the alluvium of an industrial city, Detroit, would have conditioned me to an especial and sympathetic awareness of manufactured forms in the same way that a child of another place would be stimulated by 'natural' forms during his most impressionable age."

The exhibition, which includes 27 paintings and sculpture by 24 artists from 15 countries will remain on view at the Museum through April 19.

Three paintings by Jasper Johns, who was born in Allendale, South Carolina, in 1930, have been purchased by the Museum of Modern Art, 11 West 53 Street, New York City, and are on view in a special exhibition of recent acquisitions.

The three paintings, the first by this artist to enter the collection, are White Numbers, done in 1957, Green Target, 1955, and Target with Four Faces, 1955. The plaster faces of the latter surmount a target of painted newspaper on canvas. The casts were taken individually from one model during a period of several months.

Johns, who now lives in New York, studied art for two years at the University of South Carolina. He had his first one-man show in New York in 1958 and was the only American painter to win a prize at the 1958 Pittsburgh International.

The exhibition, which includes 27 paintings and sculptures by 24 artists from 15 countries, will remain on view through April 19.

Lunar Landscape, a painting by the Australian artist Albert

Tucker, has been purchased by the Museum of Modern Art, 11 West 53 Street, New York City and is now on view in a special exhibition of recent acquisitions. This is the fourth work by an Australian to enter the collection of the Museum. The artist describes it as "a memory of an Australian land-image."

Tucker was born in Melbourne in 1914. His work has been exhibited in Amsterdam, Paris, Rome, Venice, London and New York, where he is currently living.

He describes himself as a "Self exile for cultural-nostalgic reasons. Now nostalgia operates in reverse. Find myself a dissociated fragment of a newly emerging national psyche...As for painting itself, I am not concerned with 'abstract' or 'figurative'--all meaningless to me. For me a painting is a fabricated symbol through which we view a hitherto invisible aspect of reality."

The exhibition, which includes 27 paintings and sculptures by 24 artists from 15 countries, will remain on view through April 19.
