Dear Sirs:

The Museum of Modern Art Film Library will inaugurate a new phase of its activities on Tuesday March 9th when it will open to students of the film an exhibition on the making of a modern movie. The material for this exhibition has been selected from a group of original manuscripts and scenarios production photograp's, stills, blue prints, charts and models presented to the Film Library by Walter Wanger Productions and United Artists. The exhibit has been arranged to show the step-by-step process of making the recent film You Only Live Once, directed by Fritz Lang, with Sylvia Sidney and Henry Fonda.

The Press preview for this exhibition will be Monday afternoon March 8, from two to six o'clock, at the offices of the Museum of Modern Art Film Library, fifteenth floor, 485 Madison Avenue. If you cannot attend, we shall be glad to have you drop in at any time. The exhibition will be open through April 10th from ten to six every day except Sunday.

Sincerely yours.
