RICHARD A. WILLIAMSON APPOINTED CHIEF FINANCIAL OFFICER AT THE MUSEUM OF MODERN ART

Richard E. Oldenburg, Director of The Museum of Modern Art, has announced the appointment of Richard A. Williamson as Chief Financial Officer, effective immediately. Reporting to the Director, Mr. Williamson oversees all financial matters for the Museum.

Prior to joining the staff of the Museum, Richard Williamson was Chief Financial Officer at Harman International Industries, Inc., a manufacturing company. Previously he was Treasurer of Bunge Corporation, a major agribusiness company. Mr. Williamson has also been an executive officer with City Investing Company and Mobil Oil Corporation.

Mr. Williamson received an M.B.A. degree in finance and international business from The University of Chicago; an M.A. in economics from Yale University, where he was a Woodrow Wilson Fellow; and a B.A. magna cum laude from Brown University. He is currently a director of the Chicago Business School Club of New York, and is affiliated with the Financial Executives Institute, the National Association of Corporate Treasurers, and the Yale Club. He and his wife, a lawyer, live with their two children in Darien, Connecticut.
