Fantastic Art, Dada and Surrealism is the second of a series of exhibitions planned to present in an objective and historical manner the principal movements of modern art. The first of these, Cubism and Abstract Art, was held at the Museum in the spring of this year.

The divisions of the exhibition are self-explanatory. The fantastic and the marvellous in European and American art of the past five centuries is represented in a rather cursory way. The main body of the exhibition is represented by the Dada—Surrealist movement of the past twenty years together with certain of its pioneers. A number of artists who have worked along related but independent lines are brought together in a separate division. Then follow sections on comparative material and on fantastic architecture.

Even the most casual observer will notice certain obvious resemblances between some of the works in the historical division and certain Dada and Surrealist works: for example the use of the biaxial composite double image in the two paintings, no. 2 and no. 320, or the animation of the inanimate in the work of Bracelli, no. 53, Larmessin, no. 71, Beale, no. 93, Williams, no. 169, Busch, no. 103, Ernst, no. 343, Dali, no. 323. These resemblances, however startling, may prove to be superficial or merely technical in character rather than psychological. The study of the art of the past in the light of Surrealist esthetic is only just beginning. Genuine analogies may exist but they must be kept tentative until our knowledge of the states of mind of, say, Bosch or Bracelli has been increased by systematic research and comparison. One may suppose, however, that many of the fantastic and apparently Surrealist works of the Baroque or Renaissance are to be explained on rational grounds rather than on a Surrealist basis of subconscious and irrational expression.

The section devoted to the art of the past has been strictly limited. Only European art since the end of the middle ages is represented. Oriental art and the extremely relevant art of primitive and prehistoric man have not been touched. The section on comparative material is also arbitrarily limited. No natural objects of a Surrealist character, or photographs of them, are included (save only the bearded grapes of Albersweiler, no. 44a) and no documents from such rich fields as spiritualism, astrology, magic, alchemy and other occult sciences.

No attempt will be made in this preface to add to the already very large body of writing about Dada and Surrealism.* The bibliography lists several instructive works both of explanation by participants in these movements and of criticism by outside observers. The chronology may serve to refresh the memory of those interested in historical sequences. In any case the works of art, or their reproductions, are eloquent.

It should however be stated that Surrealism as an art movement is a serious affair and that for many it is more than an art movement: it is a philosophy, a way of life, a cause to which some of the most brilliant painters and poets of our age are giving themselves with consuming devotion.

*Essays by Georges Hugnet on Dada and Surrealism, prepared for this volume, were not ready in time for inclusion. They will be published during the course of the exhibition.
Brief chronology
The Dada and Surrealist movements with certain pioneers and antecedents

1910

Paris: Cubism reaches a period of fantastically arbitrary dislocation and dis-integration of natural forms. Braque and Picasso introduce into cubist pictures "un-artistic" elements such as imitation wood, sand and letters.

Milan: Manifesto of Futurist painting: "Exalt every kind of originality, of boldness, of extreme violence." "Rebel against the tyranny of the words 'Harmony' and 'Good taste'."

Italy (or Munich?): de Chirico paints Enigma of an autumn afternoon, the first of his mysterious and disquieting views of silent city squares.

1911

Munich (1911-14): Kandinsky paints improvisations, e.g. no. *226, "rather subconsciously in a state of strong inner tension." These mark a degree of extreme irrational spontaneity approached but scarcely surpassed by Arp (1916) or later by Masson and Miro.

Paris: Duchamp begins to undermine Cubist formal purity with such pictures as the Coffee mill, no. *216, (December) with its proto-Dada mecanomorphic character.

Chagall's pictures such as Dedicated to my fiancée, no. *184, and Paris through the window, no. *185, recklessly fantastic and outré subject matter of two-headed cats, lovers soaring over roof-tops, bull-headed men; paintings later (1916) called by Apollinaire Sur-naturalisme (derived from Gerard de Nerval, 1805-55), and anticipating by a year his invention of the word Surréaliste.

Paris: Picasso and Braque make papiers collés, compositions with bits of pasted newspaper, calling cards, etc., a further radical violation of traditional ways of painting, no. 250.

Futurist exhibition. Publicity methods and typography adopted by the Dadaists four years later.

Milan: Boccioni in Manifesto of futurist sculpture recommends the use of glass, wood, cardboard, cement, horsehair mirrors, electric signs etc., anticipating Dada objects.

Paris: Archipenko's Médrano, a figure constructed of glass, wood, and metal with a strong Dadaist flavor.

Paris or Munich: Duchamp's Nude descending the staircase, King and Queen traversed by swift nudes, no. 218, The bride, no. 217.

Paris-New York (1912-13): Picabia begins to call his "orphic" abstractions by proto-Dada names such as Catch as catch can, no. 459.

New York: In the June Camera Work (Alfred Stieglitz) Picabia announces Amorphism, a proto-Dada satire on abstract art illustrating pictures containing nothing at all but the signature "Papou Picador."

Paris: Picasso's relief constructions of odds and ends of woods, paper, curtain tassels anticipate Dada objects.

1914

The War begins in August

Duchamp's Pharmacy, no. 219, a proto-Dada "improvement" of a cheap lithograph of a woodland dell by adding two small red and green druggist's signs to the trees.

Duchamp's first "ready-made," an ordinary bottle rack, no. 221, which he signed as a work of art—a completely proto-Dada gesture.
De Chirico begins to introduce bizarre pine-cones, plaster busts and geometrical objects, no. *196, and finally egg-headed mannequin-like figures, nos. *211, *214, into his pictures.

Munich: Klee’s Little world, etching, no. *231, and similar drawings suggest an uncensored spontaneity of imagery far beyond that of his earlier fantasies, no. *229.

1915

The War: Italy enters

Italy (1915-18): De Chirico and Carrà carry on pittura metafisica, nos. 197 to *215.

New York: Stieglitz Gallery, 291 Fifth Ave., publishes a review, “291,” illustrating proto-Dada work by Picabia, de Zayas, Picasso, Apollinaire, Katherine Rhoades, Agnes Ernst Meyer, etc. Duchamp arrives from Paris.

Zurich: The future Dadaists, Tzara, Arp, Janco, Hugo Ball, Huelsenbeck assemble.

The War: Verdun

Zurich: February: word DADA discovered by chance in dictionary. Richard Huelsenbeck organizes celebration at Cabaret Voltaire, founded by Hugo Ball.

March: Galerie Dada opens under direction of Tzara and Ball. Concert given at Cabaret Voltaire—Tzara, Huelsenbeck and Janco read their poems simultaneously.

July: Tzara’s first Dada manifesto read at a soirée. Publication of two manifestos: La Première aventure céleste de M. Antipyrine by Tristan Tzara, illustrated by Janco and phantastische gebete by Huelsenbeck, with woodcuts by Arp.

Paris: Dada spirit exists in Paris publications such as Sic, founded by Albert-Birot; Apollinaire, Dermée, Soupault contributors.

New York: “291” continues. Man Ray’s Theatre, no. 467, and other works in Dada spirit.

Zurich: July: Dada I and Dada II published under direction of Tzara; contain poems, articles and reproductions of works by those in Zurich group, and of Kandinsky, etc.

The War; the Armistice

Zurich: Picabia collaborates on third number of Dada. Members of Paris group also contribute: Dermée, Reverdy, Albert-Birot.

Cologne: Ernst meets Baargeld. They, joined later by Arp, lead Cologne Dadaists. Opposed to exclusively political character of Berlin Dada. (Arp and Ernst had met in 1914.) Ernst under influence of de Chirico.

The Treaty of Versailles; civil war in Germany

Zurich: Tzara publishes 25 Poèmes with woodcuts by Arp. Picabia continues "391."

April: scandalous soirée (five people dressed in stovepipes perform dance entitled "Noir Cacadou," Serner lays flowers at feet of dummy, Tzara reads Dada proclamation—crowd in uproar).

May: Nos. 4 and 5 of Dada published under title Anthologie Dada. Contains work by almost all Dadaists then known.

End of year Tzara leaves for Paris.

Paris: Dada spirit dominates Littérature, founded in March and directed by André Breton, Philippe Soupault, Louis Aragon with the collaboration of Paul Eluard.

Tzara collaborates on second number of Littérature. Members of Littérature group contribute to Anthologie Dada published in Zurich. Tzara’s arrival in Paris greeted with enthusiasm.

Cologne: Ventilator, Dada newspaper founded by Baargeld, meets with great success, but forbidden by British Army of Occupation in Rhineland. Baargeld leader of Communists as well as Dadaists but maintains integrity and independence of art.

Arp and Ernst collaborate in Fatagaga series of collages.
Hanover: Schwitters and the publisher Stegeman found Dada movement. Schwitters calls all his collages, nos. *494-496, constructions, nos. *670-678, statements, books and poems “Merz”—term with no meaning, analogous to “Dada.”

Man Ray exhibition, Libraire Six. Ernst arrives from Cologne.

Le Congrès de Paris precipitates break-up of Dadaists; Tzara and Breton oppose each other.

Tzara publishes play, The bearded heart, but Breton rounds up most of the ex-Dadaists in the new series of Littérature; this group was to assume the name "Surrealist" in 1924.

1923

París: Publication of Littérature continues. Surrealist books appear, including Les Malheurs des Immortels and Répétitions by Paul Eluard and Max Ernst in collaboration.
1924

Paris: First manifesto of Surrealism published by André Breton. In 1917 Apollinaire had given the subtitle drame surréaliste to his play Les Mamelles de Tiresias. Breton appropriated and defined the term, applying it to the movement of which he was now the leader:

"Surrealism, subst.: Pure psychic automatism, by which it is intended to express, verbally, in writing or by other means, the real process of thought. It is thought’s dictation, all exercise of reason and every esthetic or moral preoccupation being absent."

Fifth number of La Révolution Surréaliste marks formal adherence of Surrealists to Communism.

June: Miro exhibition, Galerie Pierre.

L’Age d’Or, second surrealist film made by Dali and Bunuel, given at Studio 28, creates scandal. Performance forbidden by police.

20th century pioneers

The relation of each of these “pioneers” to the Dada and Surrealist movements may be indicated briefly:

Chagall has had almost no relations with either the Dadaists or the Surrealists.

De Chirico’s art of the period 1910-18 was studied by the Dadaists and has been perhaps the most important single influence upon Surrealist painting.

Duchamp, an aloof and intensely independent spirit, has been an important influence upon both Dada and Surrealism but he does not seem to have committed himself in any formal sense.

Kandinsky has not participated in either movement but some of his work of 1911-17 interested the Zurich Dadaists and remains among the first and purest expressions of automatic painting.

Klee was admired by the Dadaists and is “claimed” by the Surrealists but he seems never to have participated in either movement beyond permitting the inclusion of his work in group exhibitions.

Picasso took no part in Dada although his papier collés greatly influenced Dada collage. During the past decade and especially in the past year Picasso has become more and more involved with the Surrealists, taking an active part in their publications and exhibitions.

Fantastic architecture

CHEVAL, Ferdinand. Born Charmes (Drôme), 1836. Originally a baker, in 1860 he became a postman at Hauterives in which position he remained until his death. He enlivened the dullness of his daily rounds by constructing in his dreams a fairy palace. One day on his route he discovered a cache of oddly shaped stones which so fascinated him that he determined to build his dream house. Thus in 1879 he began collecting the stones in his post-bag. In the evenings he cemented them into shape and, despite the ridicule of his neighbors, continued his toil, which he regarded as a mission, for 33 years. In 1912 the uninhabitable mansion was completed. He then devoted another eight years to the construction of his own tomb in which he was never buried. Died Hauterives, 1924.

GUIMARD, Hector. Born Paris, 1867. Studied at the Ecole des Beaux-Arts where, appointed professor in 1894, he also taught for four years. He has designed a great many buildings, the best known of which are the Castel Beranger and the stations for the Metropolitain, the subway system of Paris. So individual was his interpretation of the Art Nouveau that it became known among his followers as "le style Guimard."

TERRY, Emilio. Born of Cuban ancestry Paris, 1890. In opposition to the concept of the house as a “machine à habiter,” Terry feels that a building should be “a dream come true.” He is best known for his projects but among his completed works are décors for the ballets, Apollon et Daphné and Temps Difficiles and two houses. A monument dedicated to the Comtesse de Noailles is now in construction.
