- DIRECTOR: John Elderfield, Director of the Department of Drawings, The Museum of Modern Art
- CONTENTS: NEW WORK ON PAPER I is the first in a planned series of exhibitions, each of which is intended to show a relatively small number of artists through a broad and representative selection of their recent work on paper. Emphasis is placed on new work, with occasional glances backward to earlier production where the character of the art especially requires it, and on artists or kinds of art not seen in depth at the Museum before. Beyond this, no restrictions are imposed on the series, which may include exhibitions devoted to heterogeneous and to highly compatible groups of artists, and selections of work ranging from traditional drawing to works on paper in media of all kinds. Without exception, however, the artists included in each exhibition are presented not as a definitive selection of outstanding contemporary talents but as a choice, limited by necessities of space, of only a few of those whose achievement might warrant their inclusion.
- The eight artists represented in NEW WORK ON PAPER I are all in their late thirties and early to mid forties. Their art is extremely various, ranging from objective realism to lyrical abstraction, and from mural-sized draftsmanship to diaristic and almost miniaturist drawing. But all in their different ways seek to escape the constraints and restrictions of recent modernism and share a desire to re-enrich traditional modern forms either through a new sense of iconic vigor or through sensuous complication, and sometimes through both. They are: Jake Berthot, Dan Christensen, Alan Cote, Tom Holland, Yvonne Jacquette, Ken Kiff, Joan Snyder and William Tucker.
