FOR IMMEDIATE RELEASE

ONE MAN SHOW OF STAGE DESIGNS BY EUGENE BERMAN
OPENS AT MUSEUM OF MODERN ART

Eugene Berman is an outstanding twentieth-century artist whose work as an easel painter is matched by the brilliance of his scenic and costume designs for ballet and theatre. In a retrospective exhibition: THE THEATRE OF EUGENE BERMAN, opening at the Museum of Modern Art, 11 West 53 Street, Wednesday, January 22, more than 100 gouaches of Berman's designs for ballet sets and costumes and four stage models will be shown. The exhibition, directed by George Amberg, Curator of the Museum's Department of Theatre Arts, will be shown in the Auditorium and Theatre Arts Galleries.

The exhibition will be the first representative survey of Berman's complete theatrical work, including several drawings or gouaches from every production Berman has designed. It will be genuinely comprehensive, even in its presentation, for a special installation has been designed in cooperation with the artist.

Simultaneously with the opening of the exhibition the Museum will publish a monograph, written by Mr. Amberg: THE THEATRE OF EUGENE BERMAN. In his introduction Mr. Amberg says, in part:

"Ten years ago, at the Hartford Festival, Eugene Berman was presented to a limited audience for the first time as stage designer. Today his theatrical work is known to countless spectators in this country and abroad, and one cannot imagine the American ballet stage without his brilliant contributions. Meanwhile, with eight staged productions and several major unexecuted productions to his credit, he has established himself as one of the few modern painters who has an authentic professional standing on the stage.

"For Eugene Berman, though he is primarily an easel painter, stage design is not a minor or incidental occupation, to be taken up as opportunity offers, but a major creative field having its own validity. Keenly aware of the specific scenic requirements, he approaches each task with a determination and a clarity of purpose which convey to his drawings the incisive neatness of technical tracings. His sure, easy transition, from one medium to the other, is significant. Many of his easel paintings suggest, in structure and composition, in light effects and atmosphere, idealized images of illusionistic scenery. This characteristic is not casually or candidly borrowed from the theatrical stock of the historical past; it is carefully studied, deliberately evoked and masterfully applied. There is an essential and congenial relation between Berman and the theatrical magicians and technicians of the High Renaissance and Baroque.

"The supreme quality of Berman's theatrical work is its balance of intellectual discipline and creative imagine-tion. Once in possession of the primal conception, he leaves nothing to chance. The innumerable sketches which he creates in the course of a long germinating process are not indications of a lack of decision or precision;
indeed there is nothing haphazard, equivocal or hesitant in these brilliant studies. The finished work reveals the ultimate, comprehensive integration of all component factors into one unified whole: a perfect synthesis of function and effect, reason and vision.

Eugene Berman was born November 4, 1899 in St. Petersburg (Leningrad), living there and Tsarskoie Selo until 1908. He lived in Germany, Switzerland, and France from 1908 until 1913. He showed an early aptitude for drawing and painting and in 1914, upon his return to Russia, began the study of art and of architecture.

In 1918 Berman left Russia. After short stays in Finland and England, he settled in Paris, which he regarded as his home until 1937. In that city he studied under Vuillard and Denis and did some work under the architect Emilio Terry. He made his first trip to Italy in 1922 and thereafter visited that country almost yearly until 1938. Berman made his first trip to the United States in 1935. In 1937 he applied for citizenship and now makes his home in California.

Eugene Berman's first exhibition was held in Paris in 1924
where his work was shown with that of Berard, Tchelitchew, Leonide, Tonny, and others. He exhibited in Paris in 1927, 1928, and 1929 and held his first New York exhibition in 1932 at the Julien Levy Gallery. His work has been included in numerous exhibitions in Paris, London, New York, Chicago, etc., and he has had many one-man shows.

He is represented in many private collections and his work is owned by leading museums including the Metropolitan Museum of Art, The Museum of Fine Arts, Boston, the Phillips Memorial Gallery, Washington, D.C., the Fogg Art Museum, Cambridge, and the Museum of Modern Art, etc.
