NEWLY ACQUIRED DRAWINGS BY MANY ARTISTS SHOWN AT MUSEUM OF MODERN ART

Fifty drawings, most of them never before shown in New York, will be on exhibition in the Auditorium Gallery of the Museum of Modern Art, 11 West 53 Street, from January 30 through February 24. The exhibition has been directed by Dorothy C. Miller, Curator of the Museum Collections. Forty-three artists are represented in this varied group which has been added to the Museum Collection by purchase and gift over the past few years. Although 20 of the artists are American, 16 nations are represented, including Israel, The Union of South Africa, Korea, and the U.S.S.R.

The earliest works in the exhibition are drawings by the Belgian Theo van Rysselbergh, the Austrian Gustav Klimt and the American Eilshemius. Then follow works by Kokoschka, Heckel, Klee, Kubin, Pascin, and other Central Europeans of the older generation. Léger, Picasso, Marcoussis and Baumeister are represented, as are four sculptors, Brancusi, Lehmbruck, Lipchitz and the British McWilliam. Among the Americans are Kuniyoshi, Shahn and Hans Richter, and there are a number of drawings by younger American and Latin American artists, some of them acquired from the exhibition RECENT DRAWINGS USA held at the Museum last year.

Because of its serious shortage of gallery space, the Museum is able only rarely to exhibit its collection of drawings which now number over 150. However, many drawings are lent each year to exhibitions in other museums, and circulating shows from the drawing collection are almost continuously on tour.

An annotated checklist follows.

Photographs are available from Elizabeth Shaw, Director of Publicity, the Museum of Modern Art, CI 5-8900.

Harold ALTMAN. American, born 1924.
Women. 1955. Pen and ink, 5 3/8 x 10 1/2".
Blanchette Rockefeller Fund. 252.56

This is one of many studies of women in the open-air markets of New York and Paris which the artist has drawn or painted since his early childhood. He says: "These women are symbols of passing--of life going by--of the loneliness of life. They emerge from nowhere, they peer from doorways, they are fat and matriarchal, they're thin and discarded. They move about, converse, part, shuffle away."

Willi BAUMEISTER. German, 1889-1955.
Tennis Player. 1932. Pencil and charcoal, 15 5/8 x 12".
Gift of Mrs. Vahan Hagopian. 1.51.

A study for two oils of the period 1932-35 when Baumeister did a series of paintings on sand. In 1955 Baumeister wrote: "Perhaps the movement of the human figure is contained in this drawing, but it is not to be taken as a direct representation of a tennis player... who is in continuous movement... If one isolated position of his movement is taken out of the series of movements, it becomes deadly stiff. The 'movement' can only be interpreted as an abstraction."

José Ygnacio BERMUDEZ. Cuban, born 1922.

The artist says that while this drawing was not inspired by any specific object, "everything I did that summer at Fire Island related somewhat in color, shape or general atmosphere to the sea and beach and boats with which I lived. The weatherbeaten wood of shacks, the sails and ropes, not consciously abstracted—these things crept in, became apparent only later."

This is one of a series of about 50 drawings of "invented" objects which Hupper did in the late 1940s. at the Imperial Art School in Tokyo and became a prominent member of the Japanese Modern Art Association. During the war, about 1942-43, he returned to Wonsan where he became a prominent artist and teacher. In 1950 he and his family fled to the south and took refuge on an island in the Japanese straits. It was here that, lacking art materials, he scratched designs into the foil of cigarette packages. He made a great many of these which he later developed into larger drawings and paintings. Although admired as an artist, Lee could not make a living and a few months ago he died of malnutrition.

The artist writes that this drawing is based on observations of industrial sites in New Jersey as seen from across the Hudson. "I consider industrial landscape intrinsically American. Although the attitude in this drawing is still rather 'Purist' it departs from that tradition by being both more complex and more specific."

Stairway with Figure. 1930. Crayon and pencil, 9 1/4 x 11 1/4". Gift of Mme. Helena Rubinstein. 416.53.

P. E. McWILLIAM. British, born 1909.

The well-known British sculptor P. E. McWilliam was born in Banbridge, Ireland, studied at the Slade School in London, and served with the Royal Air Force in the Far East during World War II. He says: "Like most of my drawings, this is a drawing about sculpture, not for sculpture, i.e., it is not a study but a drawing done for the sake of drawing, by a sculptor."

Marine Object. 1955. Ink and watercolor, 13 1/4 x 18 1/4". Gift of the artist. 20.56.

Albert Newall, who lives in Cape Town, South Africa, was born in Manchester, England, where he studied art. He traveled widely in India, Malaya, Arabia and Africa, then settled in South Africa ten years ago. He believes that such activities as cave exploration and fossil hunting, plus his work as an aerial photographer before and during the war, have left an impression on his art. He says that although he seldom uses actual objects in his work, this drawing is of a "tubular object of calcium carbonate picked up on the beach. Interesting for its structure and rhythmic curvature. Vague subconscious significance difficult of analysis and of doubtful value."

Jules PASCIN. American, born, Bulgaria. 1885-1930.

Pablo PICASSO. Spanish, born 1881. Lives in France.
Three Children. (1903-04). Wash drawing, 14 3/4 x 10 5/8". Gift of Mr. and Mrs. Werner E. Josten. 4.56b.

Portrait of Martin Fabiani. 1943. Pencil, 20 x 13". Gift of Sam Salz. 249.54.
Hans RICHTER. American, born Germany 1888.
Fugue (Project for a film). (1920) Pencil, c. 18 1/2" x 9 1/2".
Gift of Mr. and Mrs. Irvin Shapiro. 251.54.

Richter has pointed out that on the traditional side Fugue is based on ideas which one may find in ancient Chinese painting. However, it is not focused upon subject but upon positive-negative opposition (black and white), and the stimulus and rhythm which the remembering eye carries forward from one detail, phase or sequence, and the relationships of these various parts to the whole. The juxtapositions and polarities among free forms are intended to create a counterpoint such as is experienced in music.

Larry RIVERS. American, born 1923.

Theo van RYSSELBERGHE. Belgian, 1862 - 1926.
Self Portrait. (1888-89?) Crayon and pastel, 13 3/8 x 10 1/8".

Theo van Rysselberge was born in Ghent of a family of architects. He studied in Ghent, then in Brussels, where in 1883 he was one of the founders of the Cercle des XX. Shortly after, under the influence of Seurat, whose friend and associate he became, he was converted to the theories of Neo-Impressionism.

He worked as a photographer, and held an exhibition of photographs in Paris in 1936. When war broke out he was interned in France for 11 months and during this period he began to draw. After his release late in 1940 he lived in the south of France in great poverty. His first exhibition of drawings and paintings was held in Paris in 1947, followed by a show in Milan, and two in New York in 1951 and 1952.
