The Seurat exhibition at the Museum of Modern Art, 11 West 53 Street, will close on Sunday, May 11, at 7 p.m. Since the Museum re-opened last Thursday, a little more than two weeks after the fire, 10,000 people have visited this historic exhibition which includes the famous In Cepheus. Under the terms of the donor’s bequest of this painting in the 1920’s to the Chicago Art Institute, it can only be lent once to another institution.

In order to accommodate its public, the Museum has extended its hours while the Seurat exhibition is on view and new panels open until 10 p.m.

Supper is served in the Garden Restaurant.
