SYMPOSIUM TO COMPLEMENT BILL VIOLA EXHIBITION AT MoMA

In conjunction with the exhibition BILL VIOLA, a symposium focusing on the artist's video/sound installations and videotapes will be held at The Museum of Modern Art at 6:30 p.m. on Monday, October 19, 1987. This program is presented as a special project of VIDEO VIEWPOINTS, the Museum's ongoing lecture series in which independent videomakers present and discuss their work, techniques, and theories.

Barbara London, assistant curator, Video, Department of Film, who organized the exhibition, is the moderator for the symposium. Panelists include:

Gene Youngblood, professor, California Institute of the Arts

Donald Kuspit, professor, Department of Art, State University of New York at Stony Brook

Raymond Bellour, director of research, Centre National des Recherches Scientifiques, Paris

Tickets for the symposium, held in the Roy and Niuta Titus Theater 1, are $8, Museum members $7, and students $5. They are available at the information desk in the Museum lobby. The exhibition remains on view through January 3, 1988.
